About the Book

One kid. One crime. One chance to make things right.

It was a bitterly cold day when Arthur T. Owens grabbed a brick and hurled it at the trash picker. Arthur had his reasons, and the brick hit the Junk Man in the arm, not the head. But none of that matters to the judge—he is ready to send Arthur to juvie for the foreseeable future. Amazingly, it’s the Junk Man himself who offers an alternative: 120 hours of community service…working for him.

Arthur is given a rickety shopping cart and a list of the Seven Most Important Things: glass bottles, foil, cardboard, pieces of wood, lightbulbs, coffee cans, and mirrors. He can’t believe it—is he really supposed to rummage through people’s trash? But it isn’t long before Arthur realizes there’s more to the Junk Man than meets the eye, and the “trash” he’s collecting is being transformed into something more precious than anyone could imagine…

Inspired by the work of American folk artist James Hampton, award-winning author Shelley Pearsall has crafted an affecting and redemptive novel about discovering what shines within us all, even when life seems full of darkness.

About the Author

Shelley Pearsall is the author of six books for middle grade and teen readers. Her inspiring and thought-provoking novels are used in classrooms nationwide, and she is a popular school speaker. Prior to becoming a full-time author, Shelley was a teacher in the public schools, as well as working in the education departments of several parks and history museums where she created museum theater programs. She has a B.A. from The College of Wooster and M.Ed. from John Carroll University.

Shelley’s first book, Trouble Don’t Last (2002) received the Scott O’Dell Award for Historical Fiction, and was an inaugural Choose to Read Ohio selection. All of the Above and The Seventh Most Important Thing are ALA Notable Books. All six of Shelley’s books have appeared on numerous state reading award lists.

As an author, Shelley is committed to bringing history to life for readers in engaging and compelling ways. Since childhood, she has written stories with diverse characters and voices because she believes in the possibilities of books to build bridges and start conversations. Frequently, her novels feature themes of personal courage and overcoming adversity in unexpected and surprising ways.

Today, Shelley lives in the beautiful Cuyahoga Valley National Park in Ohio with her British husband, Mike, and their shelter cat named Charlie. When Shelley isn’t writing or visiting schools, Shelley and Mike love to travel the world in search of new stories and adventures.

Talk About It!
Topics to share when discussing The Seventh Most Important Thing with young readers.

Spoiler warning! Some discussion questions refer to key elements in the book. Do not read if you do not want to find out what happens.

- Common reactions to the loss of a loved one are denial, anger, bargaining (thoughts about what could have been done to prevent the loss), depression, and acceptance. [medlineplus.gov/ency/article/001530.htm] Did Arthur illustrate these stages?

- When Shelley Pearsall describes Squeak and juvenile detention (a.k.a. “juvie”), she uses humor. How is humor used to lighten what is a serious story?

“Mr. Hampton had wanted him to find seven things to complete the project. The building blocks, he’d called them. But Arthur had also suspected they were the building blocks of his redemption too.”

Collect discarded objects to create your own masterpiece sculpture. Create a unifying theme for all the objects. Critically select each object with the thought of how it will work within the entire piece. Find ways to transform objects, giving them new meaning and life. Let your imagination go wild, experiment, and have fun! When complete, answer the following:

- How do the artwork’s elements produce certain visual effects and create meaning?
- How was experimentation used to create a new work of art?
- Why were certain objects included while others were not? Give specific examples.

The Seventh Most Important Thing is set in Washington D.C. between 1963 and 1964. Research news events in the United States during that time period, using resources available to students through INFOhio (infohio.org) and to all Ohio residents through Ohio Web Library (ohioweblibrary.org).

- Do events in the early 1960’s mirror those of today?
- Do you believe the time period, a period before the Internet and mass mobile phone usage, played a role in how the characters acted?
- How might the story and characters be different if the plot took place today?
- Do you believe our society today is more or less forgiving than in the 1960s?

Talk About It! (continued)

- What are the seven most important things and how do they work together?
- What connections can be drawn between Arthur and the discarded objects James Hampton collects?
- After being consulted by James Hampton, Judge Warner hands down an unconventional sentence. Is Arthur’s sentence of collecting junk on behalf of James really his repayment to society? Why or why not?
- How are appearances disputed within the story? Beyond James, in what ways do appearances contrast the actions of Officer Billie, Groovy Jim, Squeak, and Judge Warner?
- How does redemption play into Arthur’s transformation from an angry, grieving son?
- In Guam, James took broken objects and transformed them by creating his first piece. How does art play a role in saving both Arthur and James?
- Symbolism plays a significant role in The Throne of the Third Heaven. Describe the significance of the wings, stars, crowns and lightbulbs in the artwork.
- James Hampton’s favorite bible verse states, “Where there is no vision, the people perish.” What is the verse’s significance in the story?
- How is Arthur able to move past the death of James without violence?
Go Further! (continued)

Serious behavioral and mental health issues of anger and depression can lead to violence and drug abuse. At the time of writing, Ohio Revised Code 3313.60 states that health education in public schools for seventh and eighth grades must include the harmful effects and legal restrictions of drug abuse, but the code does not address behavioral or mental health.

- Do you believe public schools adequately address behavioral and mental health?
- Do you believe there are more resources today for someone like Arthur to seek help?
- Do you believe a thirteen-year-old today would use a brick as a weapon?
- Do you think our society today is more, less or the same regarding violence?

Like James Hampton, Elijah Pierce was not formerly trained, used religious motifs in many of his carvings, and was for many years an unknown artist. Unlike Hampton, Pierce became a celebrated artist late in his life.
